10h – 12h30: PLENARY PANEL DISCUSSIONS

Venue: TOP

The cultural dynamics and the nature of the arts and of the creative industries in international relations are rapidly changing. On the one hand, geopolitical and economic fault lines reverberate in the cultural arena. On the other hand, people-to-people relations and cooperative efforts keep the world connected and foster a growing net of cultural relations. Today, global challenges add to the already challenging green and digital transitions. There is a need to avoid the re-emergence of confronting blocks while preserving the hope to see human rights being universally respected.

10h – 11h30: Panel 1

Venue: TOP

Geopolitics by other means: cooperative culture and creativity to address global challenges

This panel seeks to initiate a dialogue between policymaking and the cultural sector on the largely untapped potential of cooperative culture and creativity as a powerful positive force in international relations, also in view of the MONDIACULT UNESCO Conference in Mexico in September 2022.

- In what ways can cooperative culture and creativity contribute to advancing and accelerating the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development?
- How can foreign policymaking and cultural diplomacy benefit from the new cooperative, transnational dynamics of contemporary arts and culture?

Moderator: Paweł Zerka, Policy Fellow, European Power programme, European Council on Foreign Relations (ECFR). Paris, France.

Speakers:

1. Louise Haxthausen. Director and UNESCO Representative to the EU, UNESCO Liaison Office with the EU, Brussels, Belgium.

11h30 – 12h30 – Panel 2

Venue: TOP

Towards the cooperative paradigm in international cultural relations: from polarising narratives to transcultural dialogue

The new cultural dynamics are a reflection of the rapidly shifting global context. Even in spite of diverging political or economic systems and barriers, current cultural trends, and the contemporary arts in particular, are generating transnational, cooperative, bottom-up models. This panel will dialogue with the conclusions of the previous session and will discuss the actual practice of some of these models and experiences.

- What are precisely the conditions and defining elements of the cooperative model? Are they universally applicable?
- How can these transcultural, inclusive creative initiatives and networks dialogue with formal cultural diplomacy and foreign policymaking?
